GIMCRACK PLAY.

He and It Succeeded, but the Actor Seemed Surprised When He Made His Thankful Speech at the Princess-Stained Glass Dime Novel on the Stage.

Kyrle Bellew wrestled with the Pathetic Fallacy last night at the Princess Theatre in a stained glass dime novel called "Raffles," and in the presence of an enthusiastic audience, largely composed of grown-up children, hurled the Ruskinian proposition triumphantly to earth at the close of Act III. After that he was called before the curtain, and later Eugene Presbrey was

Mr. Presbrey, we need hardly add, is the adapter of the piece from E. W. Hornung's stories, said to be selling to the many futile thousands. Mr. Presbrey also staged the "comedy-drama," and so he made a speech full of gratitude and midnight oil, Mr. Bellew, still in his shirt sleeves, followed and delivered himself of a few gracious words, very much to the point and not free from the element of surprise. No wonder-"Raffles" scored, and perhaps Mr.

Bellew hardly expected this happy ending He looks as impossibly handsome as ever; he is as lithe, as young as ten years ago, which is saying much; and he has lost not a whit of his charm of manner, speech ago, which is saying intent, and he has lost not a whit of his charm of manner, speech or facial expression. He wore modern evening and morning clothes unobtrusively, like the well bred gentleman he is, yet for all that he might have been encased in tin armor and wislded a two-edged battle axe. Refflee, for an artist of Bellew's capabilities, is mere sentimental fustian.

The story is not worth retailing. Suffice to say that Rafflee steals a diamond necklace, is hunted down by Capt. Bedford (Redford?), and in Act III. there is a "shilling shocker" enacted for us, and enacted extremely well. Crawshay, the grimy accomplice, has followed Raffles to his chambers in the Albany. Without the detectives "trail" their game; Bedford has stalked his from the start; the villians, great and small, cornered become desperate. mas stated his from the start; the vinians, great and small,cornered become desperate. Crauskay escapes on a rope, while Raffies pretends to have been strangled and chloroformed. It is all too childish, even for Night-Tarable.

Fighth-avenue.

Crawshay utters the one bit of wisdom in the wilderness of stupid, inept dialogue:

"There's too much talk; let's act," or something of the sort. Time indeed. Nothing but talk in Act I., in Act II. and in Act III. except for a burglarious pantomine and one utterly theatric episode in Act III. Cricket is employed throughout as a symwayman at the Garrick was infinitely better.

Mr. Bellew made love for his friend in an irresistible fashion. His speech is a model for actors in these days of slipshod enunciation and degraded pronunciation. What he said was generally nonsensebut he said it beautifully. There is a charm in hearing one's native tongue spoken euphoniously, withal naturally. Mr. Bellew's public was more interested in him than in his play.

Mr. E. M. Holland, admirable actor, was the Bedford, and very much so. His was a familiar figure. He actually infused some humor into the stage dummy, and the duel between the hunter and the hunted was followed breathlessly. It was also a duel of methods—the polished romantic and the polished naturalistic schools of setting.

and the polished naturalistic schools of acting.

Both exponents, it need hardly be added, are past grand masters. It might not be considered critical good taste to suggest that they could put their powers to better service. Does not the public like detective bogic man stories and dark lentern wit?

The general performance, barring some careless lighting effects at the start, was excellent. Orasshay, played by Frank McCormack, deserved the curtain call he received and was gracefully accorded by his principal, Mr. Bellew. He seemed the one real burglar in the piece. Hattle Russell, Clara Blandick, Stanton Elliott, Frank Roberts, Frank Connor, Ethel Matthews and Mignon Beranger were all well hews and Mignon Beranger were all well

B. CLARKIN DROPS DEAD. He Was About to Enter a Broadway Restaurant When He Fell.

Bartholomew Clarkin, a stationer and steamship ticket agent, with an office at 127 West Thirty-seventh street, dropped dead at 9 o'clock last night as he was about to enter the restaurant at 1868 Broadway.

The manager of the restaurant notified Patrolman August Wickman that Mr. Clarkin was a member of the Church of the Holy Innocents, and a messenger was sent to the pastor, the Rev. Father Michael C. O'Farrell. Father O'Farrell responded and administered extreme unction as no and administered extreme unction, as no one knew then that Mr. Clarkin was dead. An ambulance from Bellevue took the body to the West Thirtieth street station

Capt. Kligore's Son Appointed.

Capt. W. F. Kilgore of the Revenue Marine, who is supervisor of anchorages at this port, received word yesterday of the appointment of his son, Frederick D., as a Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps. BLAIR MAY NOT RECOVER.

Accused of Frauds. ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 27 .- The condition of James L. Blair continues serious and little hope is held out by his physicians for his recovery. He is kept constantly under the influence of morphine. Dr. Wyer said to-night that his patient had undoubtedly suffered concussion of the brain in falling from a ladder while training a vine on Oct. 11, but how serious this was, they were unable to determine as yet. To-day several of the horses belonging to the Blair stables were disposed of to friends of the family. Everything possible will be turned into cash to be ready to meet any claim against Mr. Blair. From accident insurance companies Mr. Blair is drawing $1,250 a week since his accident and carries also $800,000 life insurance As a result of the disclosures in the Blair case, title investigators are reaping a rich harvest, every deed to property being carefully serutinized The Grand Jury did not take up the Blair case to-day, owing to the failure of James T. Roberts to appear. Casolin's Mother, Too, Says He Killed His Sister's Husband.

FLIZABETH, N. J., Oct. 27 .- The Coroner's namest into the death of Joseph Shurkas this afternoon resulted in a verdict of willful murder against his brother-in-law, ful murder against his brother-in-law, Vergil Casolin, a musician and language teacher and son of a former Italian Ambassador to Turkey. Shurkas was shot in a family row on Saturday. When the murdered man's wife, who was expected to create a sensation by saying that a stranger did the shooting, was asked who shot her husband, she replied, "My brother." When the prisoner's mother was asked the same question, she said, "My son."

President Roosevelt concurs in the disposition of the case as made by the War Department and by the Attorney-General, whose legal opinion was sought by the War Department authorities. No useful purpose, therefore, would be subserved by such determination. An affirmative opinion could not be followed by a vindication of the law; a negative one might be regarded as an affirmance of the validity and propriety of methods of dealing with the form of the transaction is not to be so much considered as its substance.

It is a well established principle that in cases where the statute of limitations intervenes that statute cannot be waived and a trial ensue even when the accused person or persons desire to have it waived and to or persons desire to have it waived and to stand trial. The Attorney-General was prosecution. The Attorney-General was called upon for a legal opinion on certain phases of the notorious glove contract; but it is held that he could not have gone further in the case without improperly assuming the functions of a court and virtually placing Mr. Littauer on trial.

The Metrostyle PIANOLA

HE PIANOLA met the demand for a simple method of musical expression. It enabled any one to instantly play the piano, and play with an almost perfect technique. In addition, it offered its player complete artistic control of the music.

The METROSTYLE PIANOLA does more. It not only enables any one to play the piano, but guides him to play with the effect of a finished pianist.

This result is obtained by having a musician actually play the composition on this new Pianola, and, with its Metrostyle, leave an impression on the music roll of just how he has interpreted it, forming an authoritative, easily followed but not obligatory guide to intelligent, musicianly interpretation.

Hereafter the performance of the great pianists can be preserved for all time in the "interpreted" music rolls prepared for the Metrostyle Pianola.

Paderewski, Bauer, Paur, Hofmann and Moszkowski are among those who have already marked their interpretations on these rolls, and the immense value of this new Pianola is manifest when it is realized that practically every owner of a Metrostyle Pianola becomes a pupil of the world's greatest pianists.

The student, musician and novice will be repaid for investigating the latest Pianola, which introduces to the world a new and potent factor in future musical development. The Metrostyle must be seen to be thoroughly understood.

Pianola, $250.

Pianola with Metrostyle, $300. Purchasable by moderate monthly payments.
